REGIONAL FORUMS SERIES

REGIONAL FORUM SERIES

ABOUT THIS REGIONAL FORUM

Opioid abuse has reached epidemic proportions nationally and in Wisconsin. Among pregnant women, opioid use has risen significantly. Early identification of opioid-dependent pregnant women improves maternal and infant outcomes. Providers face challenges, not only in screening, but also in assuring appropriate support for women and their infants.

PURPOSE

The regional forums will focus on strategies for improving health outcomes for women and infants affected by substance use disorders. The forums will build on WAPC's 2015, "Blueprint for Action: Improving Care for Women and Infants Affected by Opioids."

INTENDED AUDIENCE

Those who want to improve care for women and infants affected by opioids, including:

- Physicians, including OB/GYN, family practice, and neonatal/pediatric
- Nurse midwives
- Nurses, including those in inpatient and outpatient settings
- Social workers
- Prenatal Care Coordination (PNCC) providers
- Public health professionals
- Home visitors
- Mental health professionals
- AODA professionals
- Community-based organizations providing support for women with substance use disorders
- Recovery coaches
- Peer counselors
- Pharmacists
- Professionals in the legal system

OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of the forum, participants will be able to:

- Describe components of a supportive environment.
- Describe a process for collaborative care planning.
- Describe a process for supporting families caring for an infant with substance exposure.

Regional Forum Learning Outcome

- Incorporate one new screening tool into their practice.
- Identify one new resource for women, families, and/or infants affected by substance use.

FACULTY

Faculty for the Regional Forums Series will vary by site and will include members of the Planning Committee. Conflicts of interest for faculty members will be included in the materials for each forum.
